THE POLITICAL PROSPECT.

We printed yesterday morning an article on the political outlook, in which the ground was taken that so far as the coming elections are concerned, and the prospects of the Republican party are involved, the situation is practically the same as it was last November.

The New York Post, in an article in the same vein Wednesday evening, takes pretty much the same view of the subject.

The objection we made to the Democratic party was that it had no policy; that its leaders were discredited and divided; that its advocates one course in the State was something else again.

For instance, "The little gout of a disease which now comes upon us to temper the drowsy summer campaign is nothing more than a day dream of the watchful politician. What the public abhorrence of official plunder and of demagogues about elevate to office in certain States men calling themselves Democrats? It would be simply a choice of men representing the least of two evils, and it could not be construed as a judgment upon political principles."

OMAHA, NEBRASKA, rejoices in the possession of a judge who has the distinction of being the most conspicuously unfit man for his position in the country. A few weeks ago a colored man applied to this brilliant luminary for a license to marry a white woman. The Omaha Redabundians returned it to him with the following indorsement:

"Every physician in any family of any race having knowledge of any case of venereal disease, or any other disease, contagious or otherwise, shall be compelled to report such case to the Board of Health, and if any physician or other responsible person has any such disease, he shall be compelled to report it to the Board of Health, and if any physician or other responsible person has
